

クラウン中3 Pot of Poison

Uluru is a famous place in Australia. It looks like a mountain, but it is actually a very big rock.

It changes its color during the day.

Sometimes it looks red and sometimes it looks purple.

Every year, 350,000 (three hundred and fifty thousand) people visit the rock.

To most of these people, Uluru is just an interesting place.

To the native people, the Anangu, the rock is a sacred place.

It is the place of their ancestors.

They started living near the rock over 40,000 (forty thousand) years ago.

The rock gives the Anangu power even today.

They deeply respect the rock and everything around it.

The Anangu are glad that people visit Uluru.

They teach visitors their history. They show people their art.

However, some people climb the rock.

Other people take pictures of its sacred places.

These actions do not show respect for Anangu culture.

The Anangu welcome visitors.

Please respect their culture and enjoy your stay while you are in Anangu land.
